

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In one method, the least significant bits (LSBs) of a first operand are compared to the LSBs of a second operand. The result of this comparison is used to determine a predicted predicate value for a predicate. A predicated instruction is then conditionally executed depending on the predicted predicate value.